

MARIAN LAMBERT'S MOTHER IS ILL UNDER LOAD OF HER GREAT GRIEF

Is Sure Her Daughter Was Pure and That She Was Trying to Rid Herself of Orpet When He Killed Her in Revenge; Resents Talk of Insanity in Family But Wonders That She Herself is Not Insane.

By FLORENCE PATTEN.

LAKE FOREST, Ill., June 3.—Once more Mrs. Lambert and I met to talk over "the case" of Marian, the pity and the worry of it, what the law is doing, what it may or may not do and so forth.

The last meeting was in the winter just after the tragic procession out of the woods.

"He's a cigarette fiend," said Mrs. Lambert then, and all the helpless anger and woe of the cheated and forsaken was in her voice. "He killed my daughter."

Today with spring in the land and all the face of nature at its loveliest, this mother proved again that time is a cure, when she said:

"I am not bitter now. I think too much of my own soul. What we think and what we do determine our peace or unrest and I would not increase my grief with bitterness against Will Orpet. His punishment will come. I do not want anything more for him than what the law decides. A jury's decision will suit me."

Mother Drifts With Sorrow.

She is so drooping, this mother, and there is such a "gone" look in her eyes, as though they found rest in nothing they gazed upon—not even the green outside. But even so, after four months, she can actually smile at times, just a shadowy smile like that of one returning from a daze. It increases the pathos. Her husband has it, too.

The have had to stand much, these two. They claim much that is untrue has been said about them, especially the charge of insanity in the Lambert family. That has cut deep, and it is false, they say. It would seem to have been dragged in to reports, says Mrs. Lambert, not only to help the suicide theory of the offence, but to bolster rumors that Mrs. Lambert's mind is giving way under the strain.

Seeing these two, I know this to be untrue. Mr. Lambert goes about his work vigorously, glad of it, relieved of some of the burden. He is clear headed, sound, sane, and end of of course. Mrs. Lambert says this:

"It is a wonder to me that we do keep from going insane. But people do not, somehow. One lives on and on and the mind is all too clear. I am not going into melancholy because I will not. It wouldn't be right and it wouldn't be fair to either myself or to Mr. Lambert."

Another hurt she speaks of—sundry criticisms that have appeared from time to time in the news, against mothers and their lack.

Criticisms of Mothers.

"Why should anyone censure mothers?" said Mrs. Lambert. "When each mother, if she is a real mother, wants to do so well for her children? If anything wrong happens, how can she be blamed if she has done what to her seemed best?"

"I know I was a good mother to Marian. I know that I reproach myself with nothing because I know I did my best," she said fervently. "If Marian did not tell her mother of her relations with Orpet, it was because Orpet forbade it and she was under his influence."

Because it was Marian's way to come to me with everything," she continued,

"and I know, too, that if I had known that they were to meet that morning in February, Will Orpet would not stand today accused of murder. He would have been chased by a policeman summoned by me and my Marian would have been alive."

Both Mr. and Mrs. Lambert are convinced that their daughter did not commit suicide. She was not that sort, they say, and she was too happy.

Girl's Condition Perfect.

"Also her condition was all right," says Mrs. Lambert, in perhaps the first public statement she has made upon this delicate subject. "I happen to know."

The caliber of Will Orpet, says Mrs.

FOREIGNERS ARE KILLED IN PERU

Striking Employees of Petroleum Company Start Massacre of Americans.

Corinto, Nicaragua, June 3.—The Peruvian government is reported unable to cope with striking employees of the London Petroleum Company who have killed a number of American citizens and British subjects at Talara, Peru, and threatened to burn the petroleum works. A message to that effect has been received by the United States cruiser Raleigh here.

The message stated that communication with Talara had been interrupted and requested that the Raleigh proceed there to the relief of the foreign residents.

The Raleigh will probably not be able to respond as, according to the warship's officers, the vessel is under orders to remain here.

Talara is the center of the Peruvian oil field, and a number of large refineries are located there. It is 300 miles north of Callao.

Lambert is proved by the statement of Celeste Youker, who had never known of a Marian Lambert.

"You see," she said to me, "how he singled them against each other? He kept up a double deal. He never could have been true to Celeste Youker because he couldn't be true to Marian. Life is guilty of many things and I do not know what is worse, his doing away with Marian or his destruction of her purity."

Card Had Refuted Him.

It was last Christmas that Marian told Orpet she was through with him, says her mother, but his pursuit kept up just the same. There were endless phone calls and endless refusals to meet him. According to Mrs. Lambert, her daughter was bored and wanted to be rid of him and her death was the result of her declared irritation and her threat to expose him if he did not let her be.

"He thought it would ruin his station," said Mrs. Lambert, "his standing at the university—his standing," she added, contemptuously, emphasizing both words, and, to save his own skin, he deliberately planned for days to kill her. He did. I feel it. He meant to do it and he did it. That's all there is to it."

"And to say that Marian had access to cyanide on the estate here, and used it is absurd, because neither she nor I ever knew it was here, had never heard of such substance, and I found out only after Marian's death that it was kept here under lock and key always."

GREAT PARADE FOR PREPAREDNESS HELD

National convention of their association adjourned in time to take their place in line.

"Safety First" played an important part in the arrangements for the parade. A large ambulance corps, in charge of Red Cross officials and nurses, was divided into groups and stationed approximately along each 100 feet of the line of march. The city health department and the ambulance staffs of many hospitals co-operated in supplying the ambulance corps.

CELLULOID EXPLODES, SETS FIRE TO AUTOMOBILE TOP

Fire in the rear of the International Liquor company's store on South El Paso street caused an alarm Saturday morning at 8:45. The fire, which started in the rear of the liquor house caught fire but the damage was slight. It is not known how the fire started.

An automobile belonging to Oliver Carr caught fire at San Antonio and Stanton streets at 9:30 Saturday morning. The fire, which started from friction between two pieces of celluloid which he was using to repair the small window in the back of his car, set fire to the top of the machine. The body of the car was not burned.

A quantity of sawdust in the basement of the Bailey store caught fire Friday night at 8 o'clock. The fire was extinguished by the department with chemicals.

A pot of beans which were being cooked in a saloon on Texas street, under the Mooseclub, caused so much smoke Friday night at 7:30 that an alarm was turned in. The beans were being prepared for the free lunch at the saloon.

HOMESTEAD IN ARIZONA IS WHATEVER IS CLAIMED

Phoenix, Ariz., June 3.—That a homestead is almost anything that the head of a family chooses to designate as such, was decided by the supreme court of Arizona in reversing the Gilh county superior court in the case of the Solomon-Wickersham company versus Sam Wulrich.

The Solomon-Wickersham company filed a lien upon two lots in Miami, owned by Wulrich and Martin Despot, and occupied by a two story building, the lower part of which was divided into stores and the upper half used as a rooming house. Wulrich had filed a claim that the property was his homestead but the company claimed that it could not be a homestead as it was occupied jointly. This, in the opinion of the supreme court, makes no difference. Any piece of ground, says the court in its opinion, can be designated by the owner as his homestead, provided its value is not over $5000.

SALESMAN ENDS LIFE; MARRIED LIFE UNHAPPY

Tucson, Ariz., June 2.—Fred M. Calvert, of Pittsburg, a salesman, was found dead in his hotel room here. Indications were he had swallowed strychnine. Mrs. Calvert, who is here, told justice of the peace Comstock she and her husband had been unable to live happily because of disputes over two of her children by a former marriage. The couple had registered at the hotel as Mr. and Mrs. William McMillan of El Paso.

ARIZONA EASTERN RETAINS MIAMI RIGHT OF WAY TITLE

Phoenix, Ariz., June 2.—The Arizona Eastern Railroad company's title to the right of way occupied by its tracks in the town of Miami has been affirmed by the supreme court. The appeal of Cleve W. Van Dyke from a decision of the Gilh county superior court has been dismissed.
